The Magic of Things

Amazing... Takahiro Iwasaki, a young Japanese artist, spends a lot of time making his artworks. But he only uses everyday materials you can easily find at home: erasers, pencil leads, plastic, cardboard, etc.

He performs magic with ordinary stuff!

Here's a clue!
Incredible! This sculpture, which you'll find at La Sucrière, only weighs a kilo!

Can you work out what this mysterious artwork is?

Help Indix draw the other half of this surprising sculpture by Takahiro Iwasaki. The dotted lines will help...

At La Sucrière you can see this shed, made with real reels of film. It was designed as a meeting-place. It's an odd house, where the spools become stools and the films turn into curtains of stories...

Poor Indix is in a reel old mess! Which path should he take to find the name of the artist who made this shed? Mind the traps!

Guess which field Agnès Varda became famous in (be coreful – the visual clues and the answer are in Grench!)

Another World Is Possible

Have you ever seen such small cars on Lyon's roads? At La Sucrière, everything is possible! Check out a video by the HeHe collective, two artists who wonder why little cars are electric but not big ones!
